NIGGERS IN THE FENCE.

Notwithstanding the fact that a number of ritepayers waited on the school board at their regular meeting last Tuesday evening and asked them to reconsider their actions in dismissing two of the teachers, and if possible to re-instate them, the board has decided to stick by their original decision. As a result Principal Liggett has notified the teachers to this effect.

Ever since we learned of the actions of the board in this matter the Review has tried to find out why two of the teachers were discriminated against. The writer asked this question at the board meeting and was told that the reason was because their grievance was so deeply rooted. It seemed very strange to us no matter what interpretation the board put on the remarks of the spokesman, how they could come to that conclusion in regard to two teachers and not to all of them when it was emphatically stated that they were all of the same opinion as the spokesman. It occurred to us that there was a nigger in the fence, and as time passed we are convinced the fence is full of niggers. Mr. Liggett has let the cat out of the bag. Mr. Liggett's dignity has been touched. He informs one teacher that the reason two were asked to resign was because they went over his head with their grievance. According to one member of the board Mr. Liggett was not at the special meeting of the board when the salary question was discussed because he would have had to stick by the teachers. To one of the teachers Mr. Liggett says he was not at the board meeting because he would have had to go against the teachers. Yes, there is a nigger in the fence and we are willing to leave it to the ritepayers to figure out just who the nigger is.

If the teachers in question should have first gone to the principal why could not the board in a courteous way have told them that.

We do not admit that they should have gone to the principal. This was a question of the schedule. Who drew up the schedule? In regard to salaries the board has established a president, as the proprietor of this paper knows, that Teacher Klink dealt directly with the board when he was negotiating for a raise of salary last summer.

We said a moment ago we were willing to let the ritepayers figure out where the nigger in the fence is but so far as the Review is concerned we are now more convinced than ever that the school is run by Chairman Bryant and Principal Liggett and that the other members of it are but in the potter's hands. In arriving at this conclusion we are not governed only by the action of the board in the matter now in hand. We have had several proofs of this in the past. Why is it that we can tell certain members of the board of things which have transpired yet those members tell us it is the first they have heard of it? Why is it that certain members of the board admit they have made a mistake but give us their excuse for their actions that the board must stick together?

What is the use of having five trustees if all have to stick by the mistakes of the few? Again we say there are niggers in the fence and the unfortunate part of it is that the board as a whole are not big enough to handle what should have been a very simple matter.

CHRISTMAS.

This is a Christmas with a difference. The old attributes which have gone to make the day "Christmas" for as long as we can remember, stretching into the elastic memories of our parents, and touching fondly those of our grand parents, are here again.

We have health, we have prosperity, we have turkeys and puddings, we have things to give and a desire to give them. We have toys and Santa Claus, we have color—the green of the pine, the red in our hearts and the white snow, which possibly has come to cover up the dirt of the past year and give us a clean sheet.

Then children are happy: you can hear them laughing. This sounds like a hundred other Christmases we have experienced and heard of, but it is different. There has never been in any other similar celebration such intense sadness, nor such whole-hearted giving. We are sad because so many little boys we once knew and saw with their Christmas stockings will not be here. We can hardly realize that they grew up, but they did and went away, each one keeping step with the other. Some of them were sitting in a cold wet trench on Christmas morning with their stockings full of mud, and some of the little fellows we knew will be lying in a great English or French hospital reading the Christmas letters, if we remembered them; with his stocking empty forever, and his sleeve too, maybe; and some of them we loved the best will not be here at all and won't need Christmas stockings. But if there is anything to what we believe at all, they will be talking it all over with the original Christmaser.

It is a different Christmas, isn't it? Without the full and free of stockings hanging up in front of the fire-place, many a one will be knit for them and many a one we'll send. But the finest difference has been wrought in our giving. We are mental givers now. For years we gave because we were expected to. Of course with the children it was different. They had Santa Claus who gave because he liked to see them happy, but we mean all the useless giving that took place between indifferent people who had formed a bad habit and had no strength of mind to stop. Most people have taken to heart the spirit of the times and have sent a card, and bestow gifts where the need is greatest. These same little boys we knew now brought all this about. We must give for them, and to the little Belgians whose Christmas dinner from us will be soup and bread; to the Red Cross, to the Patriotic Fund and of course all our old real charities. The old formal giving had to go. In its place has arisen a desire to give and give again and give a great deal because it is just and right and because we wish to do so. The true spirit of Christmas has at last through the power of sacrifice alighted in the hearts of our people.

The little boy whose personal birthday this day is remembered and who grew up and urged the people to be charitable will be mighty glad to witness the miracle.

It is sadder but we are better.

CHEAP SHELTER.

The usual apology for so few live stock seen on the average prairie farm is the lack of capital, suitable buildings or shelters, fences, market facilities and water supply. Of these, perhaps the greatest barriers to contend with are the lack of suitable buildings and abundant water supply.

For the past few years the Indian Head Experimental Farm has conducted experiments in steer feeding with the object of comparing various shelters, such as the stable, the barn, the shed with a high board fence, the straw covered shed and the bush or straw stack shelter.

During the winters of 1913-14 and 1914-15, which were rather mild, the average daily gain per steer wintered outside was 1.95 and 1.75 pounds respectively. However, the winter of 1915-16 was usually severe and the average mean temperature for December, January and February was 5.40 degrees. Nevertheless the average daily gain per steer under the various outside shelters was 4.65 pounds. It is obvious from the above results that the question of building does not deter a man from entering the live stock business. Feeders do relatively better outside than when housed in expensive barns. With prairie hay at $10.00 per ton, and feed at 14 cents per pound or $25.00 per ton, a fair average profit may be realized each year, with manure as a by-product. A market is thus provided for the rough feeds and low grade grain on the farm.

Where natural shelters, such as scrub and brush are not available, a corral with a board fence about seven feet high and a rough straw shed, open to the south, will provide sufficient shelter from the stormy weather. These shelters are easily cheaply constructed on the average farm and will be found satisfactory for all classes of live stock. Well fed cattle are not adverse to cold weather providing they can get out of the wind. The shed and also a space in front should be kept well bedded with straw, and almost invariably the cattle will choose to lie in front except on very cold days.

PAPER INDUSTRY.

Thus far the pulp and paper industry in Canada has been limited to the provinces of Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and British Columbia. Now, however, the beginning of a large development in the prairie provinces is overshadowed by the announcement that a pulp and paper mill is to be erected in Manitoba, at a point 4250 miles northwest of Winnipeg.

Each of the prairie provinces contains large quantities of timber suitable for pulpwod, and the present great demand for pulp and paper from Canada will undoubtedly stimulate the development of these important resources in the northwest. Were it not for the enormous damage done in past years by forest fires, these developments might easily rival those of the eastern provinces. Large supplies still remain, however, although to the extent of only a fraction of what they once were. On the other hand, vast areas contain young forest growth, on lands previously burned over, and if fires can be burned out there will be an opportunity for the permanent maintenance of a number of pulp and paper mills in the prairie provinces.

What better place for the establishing of such an industry than right here in Redcliff, the centre of one of the greatest natural gas belts in the world. Cheap power is an important factor in the success of any industry.

COL. HARRY BAKER, M.P. PLAYED HEROIC PART

Particulars of the Death of the Gallant Officer in the Battle of Zillebeke

Captain W. B. Rhoades, adjutant, thus writes to Miss Elsie Baker, of the death of her brother-in-law, Col. Harry Baker, M.P., in the Battle of Zillebeke: "From 9 a.m. until 4.30 we were subjected to an intense fire from all calibres. The battalion was in support about 500 yards in the rear of the first line trenches and in such a position that we could not see any adequate protection from the rain of heavy shells which seemed to search out every corner of our line."

Calm and Cheerful
"To keep a good heart at such a time when you cannot see your enemy or get a chance to return any of the fire you are subjected to is no easy task, but for over 12 hours your brother not only made whatever disposition was required from time to time with cool and calm judgment, but by his cheerfulness to us acted so that none could be otherwise than truly unafraid."

"He always had a cheery word to say to each of us as he passed along the line and the answering smile was always forthcoming. Indirectly, therefore, than anything else could have done the love and perfect confidence each felt in his commanding officer. "Our casualties were very heavy and about 3.30 p.m. the fire increased to its utmost intensity. From the intensity of the fire we judged that an attack would shortly be made on this section of our line and had just decided that the few of us who were left here—could not hope to do very much to stem it when a shell burst amongst us, killing or wounding all of us who were left—except Captain Baker, who received a bad shaking from the force of the explosion."

Received Death Wounds
"Up to this time the colonel's cheery voice had always been heard whenever a shell or bomb burst very near, calling 'Are you all right, captain?' I was not badly hurt and said: 'Are you all right, sir?' Getting no answer I felt over for a moment and found him lying unconscious but breathing faintly."

"I cannot attempt to tell you how we got our dearly-loved commander out of the trench and across the firing line to a wood for about a hundred yards till we got into a communication trench. Here we were able to render first aid but though everything possible was done the colonel never regained consciousness and died just as we got to the nearest dressing station."

LICE IRONED INTO LIFE

Landresses of French Convent Tried to be kind to Soldiers

A surgeon writes: The following story will illustrate the vitality of these nasty little beasts of lice. Our Field Ambulance once stopped at a small town in Northern France. The good sisters allowed us the use of the schoolrooms, the kitchen, and some of the bedrooms. All the officers were anxious to get their shirts and linen washed. The laundrywoman duly appeared and boiled all these articles, and the sisters ironed them for us. On the afternoon of the ironing the Mother Superior and two sisters came to us in a state of excitement, talking rapidly and evidently overcome with amazement. They explained that our shirts had been boiled and then dried in the open air. When they began to turn the socks of our shirts the lice sprang to life and were exceedingly active. They assumed so solemnly that socks sprang to active life and the comfortable warmth of the hot iron."

"I do not doubt the story. The heat had matured the chitinous exoskeleton in which the young lice lay, and out they came. Joyous, active and sportive on the nice warm surface. Hence the amazement, the quitted hands, and the consternation of the good sisters. The riddle of the extermination of lice has not yet been solved completely, but measures are in active progress towards that end."

Farmer and Vicar
The thought of a country vicar, who had long a claret in his side to the shape of a crusty old farmer, who delighted in exposing the vicar in every way. The parson, having been offered another living, accepted it and, taking leave of the parish, he called upon the farmer, when he was touched by the man's evident regret.

"Why, I thought you would be glad to get rid of me!" exclaimed the vicar. The farmer shook his head solemnly. "Well," he said, "you see, sir, I've lived here, or, nearly forty years, and my experience of our parsons is that there's never a bad 'un goes but a vicar 'un comes."

A Negative Quantity
"Ah!" he sighed, "if you only gave me the least hope!"

"Gradually" interrupted the least-seated bottle. "I've been giving you the least I ever gave to any man."

He Had Learned
Teacher—What is meant by the least of trouble?
Tommy—I know. After a spanking.

The Settlement
Going to marry your daughter is it all settled?

Concord: "Yes; every cent she had."
